JEFFERSON COUNTY KICKS-OFF MASTER PLAN PROCESS

JEFFERSON COUNTY, MO – Jefferson County is excited to announce the kick-off of the planning process to update a Master Plan for the County. Informed by community input, community vision, existing conditions, and potential opportunities, Visualize Jefferson County Master Plan will serve as the County's official guide for land use, development, economic development, and natural areas for the next 10-20 years.

Community engagement is an essential element in the planning process. Community members are encouraged to participate both in person and online throughout the Plan's development. Online, community members can complete a questionnaire and interact in an online mapping platform called Map.Social where you can place dots on an online map to highlight various types of key issues and opportunities.

"This project began a few years ago, and was put on hold due to the pandemic," said County Services Director Eric Larson. "We're all very excited to finally begin the process."
